Comex Continuous Gold
 Daily - April 1

Gold's performance this week has been encouraging as it managed to work its way right to the upper limit of its trading band. It is that upper limit where bullion bank selling has thus far capped its upward progress.

Next week's price action will therefore be revealing as to whether or not it can overcome that price capping and grind higher or whether the banks can knock it back down towards support.

While moving averages are not a safe guide in evaluating range trading markets, it does need to be noted that gold is trading above all of the major averages again, a decidedly bullish factor.
